Q1: What injunctions do you consider important for anyone to be called "A True Muslim"?

In my opinion that injunctions which are important for anyone to be called A true Muslim is that he/she should believe in Allah. It is the nature and grandeur of his belief that shapes the life of a Muslim and makes him a better muslim. If one one has strong believe in Allah, he/she would indulge in good and forbid bad, which is the essence of Islam.

If there is one single thing that represents Muslim these days or has been a representative of Muslims since Islam is the obligatory prayers. The prayers are an identity of a muslim at a superficial level, however, at a deeper level, prayers represents the essence of Islam and a true Muslim.

The remembrance of Allah. Allah is the creator and sustainer of life, therefore, for a Muslim it is imperative to remember Allah all the time, which makes sticking to the right path easier and keeps a person motivated towards being a better and true Muslim.

Being patient and Being grateful. These are two of the most important traits that are to be present in a Muslim. Being patient in hard times means that a Muslim has faith Allah that He will change these circumstances in favour, while being grateful to Him in the times of prosperity shows that a Muslim recognizes the fact that whatever good comes is from Him. It all changes for better and makes it easier for the muslim to practice Islam and to be a true Muslim.

Ethics is one of the major preaching of Islam. For a Muslim religious life is of important importance, however, in order to be a true believer the religion religious life needs to be complemented with kindness in the ethics domain as well.
